Conseil national de l'information statistique

Cnis · National Council for Statistical Information

2026–2027 Main areas of work and reflection

Strengthening the voice of official statistics in democratic debate

2024–2028 Cnis medium-term program: four orientations for 2026

1 · Population ageing

Enrich work on the statistical implications of an ageing population.

2 · Household wealth indicators

Consult on monetary and non-monetary indicators, and on whether a wealth threshold should echo the poverty threshold.

3 · Public service quality

Define quality indicators for public services from the users' perspective.

4 · Promoting official statistics

Strengthen the role of Cnis in promoting official statistics.

Cross-cutting issues for official statistics

Oversight bodies

Support audit and oversight bodies (Cour des comptes, Inspections générales) in better articulating their work with official statistics.

Micro data linking

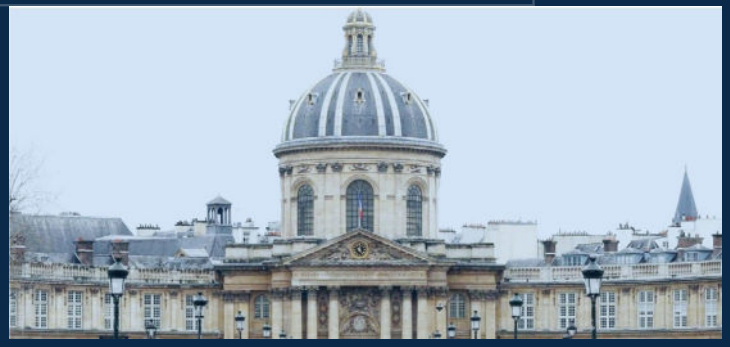
Assess the relevance of the linkages requested by statistics producers.

Health statistics

Identify social needs and report on the many advances already made.

Topics at the heart of democratic debate

Topic	Where we stand
Measuring discrimination	Working group under way; highly anticipated report on a difficult subject
Greening of education, employment and work	What impact for classifications?
Population census	Adapting the method to publish results one year earlier
Plant protection products	Innovative automated collection of survey data
Misuse of statistics	How to tackle it
Independence of official statistics	International ASP/Cnis conference, Institut de France, 19 June 2026



Looking forward

Greater impact

Improve the impact of Cnis and the conditions for broader consultation.

New audiences

Reach economics and social-science networks.

Outreach

Go towards students, journalists and influencers.

Cnis website redesign: better information and consultation, with a new button to collect the public's needs and expectations on official statistics.

Thank you

Keep in touch with the Cnis

secretariat-general@cnis.fr